BREACH OF PROMISE.

A wealthy citizen sued by a lady of Cincinnati for failure to perform the marriage contract—Amorous correspondence and the gradations of affection and estrangement.

(From the Chicago Tribune of Saturday.)

A suit was recently commenced in the Superior Court of this city, which promises in its developments to excite an interest beyond the ordinary course of legal matters. It probably involves some of the dollars of the accumulated sum to the credit of the account of Mr. E. C. Sprague, a real estate dealer of this city, who, in his own statement he corrects, is worth, at the present value of his property, about half a million. He is not understood to be the owner of a block of buildings near the Adams House, for which, in the middle of the year, he was offered $22,000 yearly rent.

Mr. Sprague is charged with having made a promise of marriage which he has neglected to perform, and which he now refuses to acknowledge. He is brought into court, perhaps, by a little strategy, but it is found that he is not so easily taken. He is a man of considerable means, and he is a man of considerable means, and he is a man of considerable means.

The lady was born in the city of Cincinnati, where she lived with her parents to the present time. She has been during six years, preceding the alleged breach of promise, in the employ of Mr. Sprague. The defendant was an old friend of the family, but his acquaintance with the daughter had been more recent. Seven years since he had been introduced to her by a mutual friend. He called on her, and she called on him, and they became acquainted. He called on her, and she called on him, and they became acquainted.

The decision announced, the crowd had time to think of the driver of the horse General Butler, and loud cries were raised. The driver of the horse General Butler, and loud cries were raised. The driver of the horse General Butler, and loud cries were raised.

FATAL RACE.

Trot Between Cooley and General Butler—The Driver of the Latter Killed.

The telegraph has told the result of the race between Butler and Cooley at Chicago on Saturday, and of the murder of Butler's driver. From the Chicago Tribune we copy the following account of the race. The result of the fourth heat, which was given by Butler, gave great dissatisfaction.

The crowd pressed forward in front of the judges' stand, and the most clamorous outside were heard. Butler was loudly cheered, but the majority of the spectators on the ground, judging from the cries that were heard, seemed to be in favor of either giving the race to Cooley, or to the dead heat. Finally the result was decided, and the track was cleared for the fifth heat.

It was now completely dark, and the last run was made by moonlight. Angry words were heard between the drivers, and the crowd divided into two parties, some being in favor of postponing the race, while others loudly demanded that it should go on. After much delay, and much noise and quarreling, which threatened to break out into a riot, the start was made. Butler taking the lead by a length. Both horses then seemed to vanish into the darkness. It was impossible to follow the track, and the crowd waited at the winning post with a breathless interest for the result. It was a moment of raised, and Cooley came in under the wire. Close behind him came Butler, who drove and went careening round the track. The crowd gathered around the stand in wonder and astonishment to learn the cause. Again Butler came round, and then Cooley came round.
